Bachelor of Arts in Political Science International Relations/Comparative Politics

College of Humanities, Arts and Social Sciences

PROGRAM OVERVIEW

The Bachelor of Arts in Political Science at the College of Humanities, Arts and Social Sciences at the University of the Incarnate Word expands awareness and understanding of political life and issues of public concern and stimulates scholarships and continuing interest in government, government service, and international affairs. Students also may explore themes of war and peace and the effects of globalization, the role of international law and organizations, and America's leadership in the world.

International Relations/Comparative Politics Track

This track integrates courses from both the fields of International Relations and Comparative Politics. Students examine global political structures and climates of European and Asian countries, as well as politics in developing regions. Political Science majors choosing this track round out their 18-hour track requirements with study in human rights, U.S. foreign policy, globalization, and terrorism and conflict.

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

Political Science majors develop analytical skills, combining organized knowledge with practical experience that introduces and prepares students for career opportunities in the public as well as non-governmental sectors. Graduates of UIW's Political Science program are at work throughout the United States and abroad. They include teachers and educators, administrators, public safety officers, attorneys, law enforcement officers, and non-profit leaders. Others have pursued law school or continued their studies at the master's or doctoral level. Others have worked at institutions such as the United Nations or the Democracy Collaborative, non-government organizations (NGOs) and many more. The professional forecast for political science majors looks bright. In the United States today, there is an increased demand for public policy analysis in both government and non-government organizations, which will support employment growth. In fact, between 2019 and 2029, employment of political scientists is projected to increase 6%, faster than the average for all occupations.
