Bachelor of Arts in Religious Studies

College of Humanities, Arts and Social Sciences

PROGRAM OVERVIEW

The Bachelor of Arts in Religious Studies in the College of Humanities, Arts and Social Sciences (CHASS) at the University of the Incarnate Word prepares students to understand the implications and expressions of faith, and apply that understanding through several career options.

The B.A. in Religious Studies challenges students to understand how faith shapes the thoughts, lives and ethics of individuals and communities.

Courses encompass various approaches to the study of religion. They explore ritual and textual traditions, consider the early formation of religions, and investigate the interaction of religious beliefs and practices through various societal aspects. Fields of study include Theology, Biblical Studies, Spirituality, World Religions, Ethics, and Religion and Culture. Students become familiar with several major religious traditions in the world in addition to Roman Catholicism. Students explore perennial questions concerning the reality of God, the meaning of human existence, the significance of the Bible, the dignity and liberation of the person, and ways to live ethically in a global world. To this end, students learn to appreciate religious diversity and the roles of religions and religious faith in shaping human life, as exemplified particularly in the Roman Catholic tradition.

QUICK FACTS

- Student can choose between four concentrations: Biblical Studies, General Studies, Theological Studies, Catholic Studies.
- This liberal arts major prepares students for graduate studies in religion, teaching, ministry, literary studies, history, and psychology as well as law school, medical school, and business school.
- In their final year of study, students can take a Field Experience course. The Field Experience is a practicum experience designed for students who wish to enter religious education or church ministry.
