Dependent students must provide parent information on the FAFSA in order to complete the application process. Students who are unable to secure parent information because a parent refuses to complete the FAFSA are still dependent students, and not eligible for independent status. By federal regulation, these students may still complete the process without parent information; however they will be eligible for unsubsidized direct loans only, up to the dependent annual limit.

Dependent students without parent information on the FAFSA are ineligible for grants, work program funds or subsidized direct loans.

Required Documentation:

Students whose parents refuse support are not eligible for a dependency override, but they may be able to receive unsubsidized Stafford loans only. For a student to be eligible for this provision, the student must provide documentation (1) that their parents refuse to provide information for their FAFSA and (2) that they do not and will not provide any financial support to them. Include the date support ended. If the parents refuse to sign and date a statement to this effect, students must get documentation from a third party (the student is not sufficient), such as a teacher, counselor, cleric, or court.

Students providing the required documentation can be awarded the student unsubsidized Stafford loans up to the maximum the student would normally be eligible for depending on his grade level (but not the amount a student can get when his parent is unable to get a PLUS loan).

Student Certifications:

I understand that this form documents that I will not have parent information on my FAFSA application, because my parent refuses to provide information. I understand that submitting this for the current academic year will allow consideration for unsubsidized direct loans only. I will not qualify for grants, federal work programs, or subsidized direct loans. I will be eligible for the unsubsidized amount up to the amount for dependent students by grade level.
